Improvement in Horse Stocks.

The necessity for improvement in our horse stocks, so well placed before the Texas Live Stock Association, will not fail to have great weight with all ranchmen who have held back from incurring expense for improved stock on account of the difficulties in the way. The paragraph of the report referring to horses is particularly telling in the way the subject was handled. Here we have it:

"Bone, muscle and flesh, with the accompaniments of speed, strength and endurance, can be produced as cheaply and as well here as elsewhere. The native stock furnishes a splendid basis upon which to breed up classes of horses that will hold their own upon any field, and along any drive, and with every competitor, from whatever quarter he may come."

There is no difficulty in the way of improving horse flesh in Texas, and yet for every native Texas mare bred to a superior stallion on Texas soil, at least ten are driven or shipped away, at heavy expense, for the purpose of combining the sterling qualities of our hardy Spanish cross, with the strength and size of the heavier breeds. A Kansas, even a Kansas breeder will smile at a Texas raised horse and will take home a car load of mares to raise animals as three year olds to bring one hundred and fifty dollars each while the offspring of the sister mares remaining on the ranch are raising forty to fifty dollar cow ponies.

A fearful mistake is made in running with the native horse stocks, stallions which are but selected animals from the herd. No acclimating fever or danger of the improved stock dying can be urged as an excuse nor can any reasonable objection be urged for not making a decided improvement in every part of the State.

The cattle raiser can object, from the dangers of acclimating fever, the horse raiser cannot. Except in pastures the cowman cannot get the exclusive benefit of his improved blood. With the horseman it is different, he can fully control his own property and he who pays most attention to his breeding stock will show the very best results.

The Texas horse is recognized as filling an important place in the states as an animal, having powers of endurance under hard treatment beyond all others and is valued for those qualities alone. The recognition thus far, although complimentary to the animal, says but little for the breeder, and until a general advancement is made in size and the finer points of a good horse, the reputation of Texas as a horse raising state will be such as to bid down prices below the actual and intrinsic value of the stock.—Texas Live Stock Journal.

The Winter Pasture—Losses and Prospects.

Now that the spring has fairly opened and we reasonably expect to have mild weather, we can safely give reports of losses of stock during the winter. The months of January and February were the coldest known in this section for many years, and the losses of sheep and other stock were unusually great. In some sections a few flocks lost from 25 to 30 per cent, while neighboring flocks lost less than 2 per cent. The greatest losses occurred in sage grass ranges and in flocks which were lambing. In the mesquite grass ranges, losses varied as follows, from 10 per cent, to a possible 2 per cent, in the same neighborhoods.

In the country west of San Antonio losses were very light, in some counties amounting to 2 per cent. We place the losses in the country south and west of Mason county, known as Southwest Texas, at 12 per cent, of sheep and 5 per cent, of cattle, the heaviest losses being in the counties south and east of the International railroad. While there is enough moisture in the ground to insure a crop of grass, there is no water in the back ranges, and stock are forced to travel some distance for grass and water, as the grass near permanent water has been eaten or tramped out. The most of the breeding flocks are now lambing, and losses of lambs will be heavy on account of the ewes being in bad condition.—Texas Wool Grower.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap for diseases of the skin.

The Texas legislature seems to realize at last that the stockman has rights that they ought to respect. Perhaps that late meeting of the Texas Live Stock Association did the good work, or perhaps the influence of the stockmen in the legislature was all sufficient. At any rate, there is a gratifying disposition manifested now by our law makers to do something sensible in the interest of that class of men in the state heretofore the most neglected by them.—Texas Wool Grower.
